My dear Mr Forman

On the 4th of this month I sent you a note enclosing my life certificate, As you are always so punctual, and I have not received an answer, I am inclined to think that either your letter, or mine has miscarried.

In the Post office here, there are many robberies of letters with enclosures. Three months since my daughter lost one from Cuba.

Yours very sincerely
L. Fuentes de Lemos

My dear Mr Ferman

Your three first questions, I am sorry to say I am quite unable to answer, for I was very young when the first volume of Vasari was written. I was then living at a Boarding school at Walthamstow, and seldom saw my Brothers more than for short visits, three or four times a year. I was frequently invited during the vacations, by the Dicks, Reynolds, Wylies, and other friends of my brothers; but my Guardian Mr Abbey was too careful of me, and always kept me a complete prisoner, having no other acquaintances than my books, birds, and flowers.

The sonnet to Georgiana Augusta Wylie was addressed to my sister in law.
